Sagacity of Juries The following is extracted from the report of a conversation between Sir William Erle, then Chief Justice of the English Court of Common Pleas, and "Senior," a contributor is strange, by the way, that every one is those to those to Appleton's Journal for June:

September 1st, (1861).—I will throw to—

September 1st, (1861).—I wil to Appleton's Journal for June : gether my conversation of the last two days with Sir W. Erle.

I mentioned that in all the Swiss constitutions trial by jury in criminal matters was re-Erle. And very wisely.

Senior. Wisely for the purpose of keeping power in the hands of the people?

Erle. Wisely for all purposes.

Senior. Including the discovery of truth? Erie. Including the discovery of truth. I believe that a jury is in general far more likely to come to a right decision than a judge. Senior. That seems to me atrange. The judge has everything in his favor-intellicence, education, experience, and responsi-

Erie. With respect to intelligence, a judge is certainly superior to an ordinary juryman; but among the twelve there will generally be found one, often two men, of considerable intelligence, and they lead the rest. As to edu-cation, the jury have decidedly the advantage. The education of a judge, as far as relates to deciding fact is the education of a practicing barrister who is immersed in the world of words, and removed from acting in the commercial, agricultural, and manufacturing facts which form the staple of contest. He is so and unreal. Then he is essentially a London gentleman; he knows nothing of the habits of thought, or of feeling, or of action in the middle and lower classes who supply our litigants, witnesses, and prisoners. And it is from barristers thus educated that judges are taken. When tried by a jury, the prisoner is tried by his peers, or by those who are a little above his peers, who are practically accustomed to the facts adduced as probantia, and can truly appreciate their value. I have often been as-tonished by the sagacity with which they enter into his feelings, suppose his motives, and from the scattered sudicia offorded by the evidence conjecture a whole series of events. For, after all, the verdict, if it be a conviction, must always be a conjecture.

Experience the judge certainly has. As ounsel or as judge he has taken part in many hundreds of trials. The juryman may never have served befere. But this long experience often gives the judge prejudices which warp his judgment. The counsel who are accustom ed to plead before him find them out and prac-

I was counsel in a case of assault. My client had had three ribs broken by a drunken bargeman. The opposite counsel cross-examined as to whether since the accident he had not been a field-preacher, whether he had not actually preached from a tub. He admitthis, for, though a man could not easily preach directly after his ribs had been broken, he might when they had reunited. The judge summed up strongly against me, and my client got nothing. I afterward found that the judge had an almost insane hatred of field-preachers. It is true that each juryman may have preju-dices equally absurd, but they are neutralized by his fellows, and, above all, they are not known. They can not be turned to account

As for responsibility, a judge being a permanent officer, especially a judge sitting alone, is more responsible to public opinion than any individual juryman, who is one of a body assembled only once and immediately dissolved. But I believe that the feeling of moral res-ponsibility is much stronger in the case of the sembled only once and immediately dissolved.
But I believe that the feeling of moral responsibility is much stronger in the case of the juryman, to whom the situation is new, whose attention is excited, who for the first time in this first scaled upon to exercise public important functions in the face of all his page. pertant functions in the face of all his neighbors, than in that of a judge who is doing today what he has been doing perhaps every day for ten years before. I have seen dreadful carelessness in judges. Again, a judge is often under the influence of particular count.

and fuger from the even forward a country of n under the influence of particular counrelies on, and some he fears. It is easy for a tells. It has a strong and offensive smell, and feudant-indeed, he is almost always so; it is trils, the bird loses its appetite, refuses fool, difficult to be impartial between counsel and mopes about, and soon dies. The simplest

I could decide only by an effort; they were so false, so sophistical, so anxious to dress up a sit goes to sleep. Often it will be found that cause which was sufficiently good if merely clearly and simply stated, that I was almost ashamed to decide for them lest I should be supposed to have been deceived. But I do not recollect having had favorites.

ion of the speaker. Sentor. Just as a juryman, who had been in court during the whole sitting at Liverpool, congratulated Scarlett on having been always loyed by the side that was in the right. What class give you the best jurymen?

Erle. The respectable farmers and the higher shopkeepers in the country towns. The men from the great cities, accustomed to excess in trade speculations, are inferior to them, especially in an honest sense of daty. The worst juries that I have known came from such places. Their adventurous gambling trade seems to make them reckless. At one time they appeared to have pleasure in decid-ing against what they supposed to be my opin-ion, which I counteracted by seeming to give more emphasis to the reasons in favor of the decision to which I was opposed. One of the things which used at first to surprise me is the very small motive which is enough to lead men to commit atrocious crimes.

"I know how Morgan was killed," said Mr. Weed, "and when and where he was killed and who killed him. It was a dreadful mur-

How do I know?" he asked repeating my question. "I know it because the mselves confessed it to me before they

"Is it possible !" I said "Will you tell the "Yes; I have told it partially before. Iy was in 1834, about five years, after the sudt den disappearance of Morgan, that, on mtrial for libeling the Musons, two men volun-tered to be my witnesses. One of these men was John Whitney."

I think Mr. Weed said the other was the man wee had charge of the old fort where Morgan was confined by his captors.

He went on: I invited them to eat some oysters with me after the trial, and while we were at the table John Whitney consented in reply to our urgency, to make a clean breast of it about the nurder of Morgan He declared the terrible secret has been a burden on him day and night, and then he told who the men were who left the lodge one dark night to put Mor-gan out of the way, least he might reveal the secrets of the Order. He said he was one of the men. The others were Col. William King, Garside. Howard and Chubbock. They went to the fort, bound the prisoner hand and foot, laid him in a boat, carried him to about the middle part of the Niagara river, where it was two miles to either shore, and then tying weights to his head and heals, they flung him overboard. When he had told the story, Whitney said he felt relieved. The other witness turned to him, and said. "John Weed ness turned to him, and said, "John, Weed can hang you now." "Yes," said Whitney "but he won't." I thought much about my "but he won't." I thought much about my duty to thepublic, but it was obviously impossible to convict him unless he would say soleanly in court what he had said to me.

It was nearly thirty years afterward when I met John Whitney in Chicago, when I was there at the Convention in 1850. He came to me and said he wanted to make a careful confession for me to write down, to be published after his death. There was nobody else he dared to trust it to, he said. I agreed to commit his dreadful secret to paper as soon as the Convention adjourned. The hour it adjourned he was waiting for me at my hotel. I was in the depths of disappointment, and was busy with a hundred things, and I told Whitney that I should come back to Chicago shortly, and would then attend to it. We exchanged letters after that, but he died suddenly and I never saw him again.

"The Chicago papers," I said, "ought to look up his relatives or friends there, and see if he left any document or told his secret."

"Yes," he replied, "it would be well. It is strange, by the way, that every one of those for any document or told his secret." BUILDING MATERIALS!

[From the S. F. Post, July 22nd.] China and Hawaii.

It may not be generally known that the attempt to establish a Chinese steamship line, under a Hawaiian subsidy, came very near being successful. The bill before the Hawaii-an Legislature would certainly have been carried, if the American side of the case had not been presented by Mr. Oakford, of this city, who very fortunately happened to be visiting the islands at the time, and enjoyed the confdence of the Kanaka representatives. The project was to subsidize, for a term of years. a direct line of steamers between China atd the islands, said steamers to be owned and sailed by Chinamen, under the Chinese flag. The course of trade would have been from Hongkoug, or some Chinese port, to Honolulu, carrying passengers and cargo; thence to San Francisco, and return to China. This scheme would have been ruinous to our growing trade with the islands because it would have thrown the bulk of freight into the hands of the Chinese company. Moreover, it would have been rainous to our direct China trade, as any business man will perceive at a glance; at it would have practically transferred all reaccustomed to deny what he believes to be sulting advantages of the reciprocity treaty with the insular kingdom into the hands of look for premises, not for conclusions, that he loses the sense of true and false—i. e., real jurious to California, and certainly would have led to international complications on the Chinese question. If this commercial project had been carried out, the Chinese government could assent to everything our treaty commission might demand or suggest, and yet coutinue unlimited coolie emigration to the Paci-fic slope. Nothing would be easier than to establish an emigration depot at the islands, which the Chinese could make self-sustaining, and there land the coolies intended for San Francisco. They could be brought along each alternate voyage and would appear truthfully on the ship's manifest, as passengers from Honolulu. In this way any passenger treaty with China could be evaded, and we have no doubt whatever that such was the intention of the promoters of this scheme. Upon the presentation of arguments setting forth the reci-procal duty of Hawaii under its treaty with the United States, the Kanaka legislature unanimously rejected the measure, although its promoter- had full assurance at the outset that it would be enacted. Hawaii cannot now be used, as contemplated by the Chinese, as an outlying post of the empire for the invasion of America, and the credit of this is due to the intelligent action and perseverance of a private citizen of this country, as already stated. It would be well, however, if our not actually preached from a tub. He admit-ted that he had. I did not see the drift of with the Rawaiian government and came to an understanding on this Chinese question for future action. The Hawaiian group of islands should be colonized by Americans and developed by American capital. This process is now silently, but surely, at work; but it may be interrupted and ultimately stopped altogether if the Chinese acquire the commercial supremacy there, for which they are con-tending. The Hawaiian Government has been authorized by law this session to continue for the Pacific Mail Company.
